

ABSTRACT

A receiver, particularly a mobile telephone receiver, includes a holding element connected to the casing by at least one band slidably retractable therein. This telephone receiver is characterized in that one of the ends of the casing includes a cylindrical rotation element, which is mounted to rotate with respect to the casing about is principal axis to which the band is connected at least in rotation.